General rule – Opportunity Attack · "Playing the Game" chapter of SRD 5.2.1

You can make an Opportunity Attack when a creature that you can see leaves your reach without taking the Disengage action and without being teleported or forced to move (which doesn't provoke).

You use your Reaction to make one melee attack with a weapon or an Unarmed Strike against it. The attack happens right before the creature leaves your reach.

🎲 Quick summary:

1. The creature leaves your reach (not just moves within it).
2. You see it.
3. It didn't use Disengage, nor was it teleported or forced to move.
4. You spend your Reaction: one melee attack.

⚠ Change from 2014

The rule is the same; the 2024 text clarifies that the attack can be an Unarmed Strike (so a Grapple or a Shove) and that teleportation and forced movement don't provoke it.

⚠ Flaw in the rule and fixes Table rule

The text doesn't say how to handle invisible creatures or ambiguous reach weapons. Fix: the DM announces choices before the game.

💡 Narrative option: Table rule

The DM can describe the enemy turning their back, leaving an opening: the blow lands before they get away.

Step 1 – Spot the trigger:

A visible creature leaves your reach: 5 ft by default; more with a reach weapon. Moving within your reach triggers nothing.

Step 2 – Check the exceptions:

No attack if the creature used Disengage, was teleported, or was forced to move (without using its movement, action, or Reaction).

Step 3 – Spend your Reaction:

You have only one Reaction per round: if already used, no Opportunity Attack. You can drop a readied action to make it.

Step 4 – Attack:

A melee attack with a weapon or an Unarmed Strike (including a Grapple or Shove). A spell doesn't qualify.

Step 5 – Resolve:

The attack roll happens right before the creature leaves reach. If the attack drops or kills it, it doesn't move.

Example: the goblin leaves Brann's reach without Disengage. Brann spends his Reaction: sword attack, 12 against AC 13: a miss. The goblin continues moving.

Triggers	Doesn't trigger
Leaving reach on foot	Moving within reach
Leaving reach mounted	Disengage
Leaving by crawling	Teleportation
Spending movement to leave	Forced movement
Leaving a creature that can see you	Defender can't see the creature

⚠ Common questions:

How many Opportunity Attacks per round?

One: it uses your Reaction.

What reach?

5 ft, or more with a reach weapon: the trigger is leaving reach, not the square.

Does a ranged attack qualify?

No: only melee or Unarmed Strike.

Can a spell make an Opportunity Attack?

No: casting a spell is an action, not an Opportunity Attack.

Can a blinded creature make one?

No: you must see the creature leaving reach.

Can I grapple or shove?

Yes: with an Unarmed Strike attack.

Does Disengage suffice?

Yes: for the rest of the turn, no Opportunity Attacks.

Must I attack?

No: it's an option you can decline.

⚠ Debate points and table options:

Table rule

Invisible creature

If you can't see it, no attack. Option: the DM may allow it if you know where it is.

Ranged attack in melee

The SRD allows only melee. Option: also allow thrown weapons.

Circling movement

Staying within reach triggers nothing. Option: keep it.

Pushed creature

Forced movement doesn't provoke. Option: keep it.

Several defenders

Each defender has their own Reaction. Option: each attacks in turn.

⚠ Rule clarifications (answers found on the web, reworded):

Readied action

A readied action isn't a commitment: you can drop it for an Opportunity Attack, but you have only one Reaction per round.

Reach weapons

The attack triggers when a creature leaves reach, not the square.

Blinded

A Blinded creature can't make an Opportunity Attack, unless it has Blindsight.

Grapple or Shove

An Opportunity Attack can be a Grapple or Shove, via the Unarmed Strike.

Spell attack

A melee spell attack can't serve as an Opportunity Attack.
