INITIATIVE (5E, 2024 RULES) – DESCRIPTION

Initiative determines turn order during combat. At the start of an encounter, every participating creature makes an Initiative roll, a Dexterity check. The roll gives an Initiative count, which sets its place in turn order. The order stays fixed for the whole combat.

🎲 Calculating your Initiative bonus:

Initiative bonus = Dexterity modifier + miscellaneous bonuses (feats, spells, items, etc.). Some classes and feats change this roll.

- Class: Barbarian level 7 – Feral Instinct: Advantage on Initiative rolls.
- Feat: Alert: add your Proficiency Bonus to Initiative. You can also swap Initiative with a willing ally.

Choosing the Initiative rule:

- Standard rule (default): each player rolls 1d20 + Initiative bonus. The DM rolls for monsters. One roll for a group of identical monsters. Table rule
- Table option (fixed score): the DM uses a fixed score of 10 + Initiative bonus, +5 with Advantage and −5 with Disadvantage. Table rule

Ties:

- Between monsters, the DM decides who goes first.
- Between player characters, they decide among themselves.
- In a monster / PC tie, the DM decides.

Table tip: on a tie, reroll 1d20 among those involved. The highest wins. Table rule

Special case:

Note in advance how your mount, familiars, or summons work for Initiative, to save time at the roll.

🐴 Controlling a mount:

You can control a mount only if it has been trained to bear a rider (horse, mule...). While you ride it, it acts on your Initiative and can take only the Dash, Disengage, or Dodge actions. It can move and act on the turn you mount it. An independent mount (it lets you ride but doesn't obey) keeps its own Initiative and acts on its own.

Step 1 – Establish positions:

The DM describes the starting positions of characters and enemies based on their declarations (marching order, stealth, placement on a map, etc.).

Step 2 – Determine surprise:

In 2024, surprise gives Disadvantage on the surprised creature's Initiative roll.

Example: an ambushing group attacks unseen. The unaware enemies roll Initiative with Disadvantage.

- Change from 2014: a surprised creature no longer loses its first turn. It only suffers Disadvantage on Initiative.
- Being Incapacitated when you roll Initiative also gives Disadvantage.
- If you are Invisible when you roll Initiative, you have Advantage.

Step 3 – Roll Initiative:

- Normal: 1d20 + Initiative bonus.
- With Advantage: 2d20 + Initiative bonus, keep the higher.
- With Disadvantage: 2d20 + Initiative bonus, keep the lower.
- Advantage and Disadvantage cancel: a single d20.

Example: an Elf (Dex +3) is surprised. He rolls 2d20 + 3 and keeps the lower. With 14 and 6, his Initiative is 6 + 3 = 9.

Step 4 – Take turns:

Once the order is set, each creature acts on its turn. When all have acted, a new round begins, until combat ends.

⚠ Flaw in the rule and fixes Table rule

Even at Disadvantage, a character can roll a better Initiative than another with Advantage: Initiative remains a d20 roll with wide swings. It can feel inconsistent, especially if a surprised character acts before their attackers.

💡 Narrative option: Table rule

The DM can describe a reflexive jolt from the surprised character (acting on instinct, without clarity), or stress the clumsiness of the one springing the surprise.

⚠ Rule clarifications (answers found on the web, reworded):

Readying an action

You can't delay your turn: you act or you ready an action. A readied action isn't a commitment: you can drop it for an Opportunity Attack, but you have only one Reaction per round.

Readying a spell

A readied spell spends its slot when readied, even if the trigger never happens. The target must be in range when the trigger occurs, and the action happens right after it.
